vol.39 no.13

April 11, 1975

The views in this publication are views of the individual writers and do not necessarily reflect those of Marian College...

The Marion County Juvenile Court needs you to be a friend to a youngster on probation. Volunteers are also needed in a special reading tutoring program, a job development program, in administrative work such as public relations, witness coordinator, and in recidivism research.

A required three-day orientation course will be held the evenings of May 5, 7, and 9 from 7:30 to 10:00 at the Juvenile Court Building. Discussions will focus on the role of the Court in the community, who the clients are, interrelationships of delinquency with family, school, cultural and environmental community problems, and techniques for working with troubled youth and their families.

For more information, contact Mrs. Nancy Frenzel at 925-5170.

NOTE: The following three sessions, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. each night, are required for all volunteers and are necessary for continuation in the program. A half day of Court hearings and a tour of the Juvenile Center will be announced. Orientation will be held in the Juvenile Court staff conference room, 2451 N. Keystone, basement. Parking is available in the lot off Keystone, south of the Court Building.

REASONS

If I invite you to my room, it's because I want company and a happy smile.

If I stare into your eyes, it's because I'm comforted with waves of warmth and friendliness.

If I put my arm around your shoulders, it's because I need to lean on you and feel reassurance.

If I kiss you, it's because I depend on your lips to say the words I need to know.

If I rest My head on your lap, it's because your thighs form a perfect pillow.

If I ask you to make love, it's because I love you.

Prom season is upon us once again but with a switch in format this year. The topic of many conversations have been centered around the controversial nomination for Chuck Traylor as Prom Queen. Question after question has arisen as to the legitimacy of Chuck's desire. I submit that the only place to find the real reasons behind this charade, is the man himself.

Traylor's story is pure and simple, but he tells it with a regalness and sincerity befitting any Queen.

The whole thing began sitting around with a group of friends from Doyle Hall. The talk was about the mystical Clare Hall Block which can never be pinpointed but always seems to show in the voting. The best way to end female domination in these events was to nominate a male candidate and thus create a Doyle Hall Block. Chuck was the most likely person to rally behind because he fulfilled all the requirements of a successful queen. He is a senior, a well known personality and has a pair of sexy legs.

Chuck backed up the prerequisites with some solid reasons. He feels that Marian is long overdue for a change of pace; a change which would benefit the entire community. He feels his nomination would attract a large crowd to the Prom and thus provide a friendlier atmosphere everyone would enjoy. This also provides the Women's Libbers a chance to live up to their equal rights doctrine. With these thoughts in mind, Chuck Traylor accepted the proposal and nomination with a smile--which would have warmed the heart of a corpse. (last year's Queen)

The thought that Chuck might win has been scaring quite a few people. His nomination is indeed without precedent in Marian's history of precedence. Chuck may bring tradition crashing down, but he does it without the intent of insulting anyone. He merely feels that males should have the same opportunity of winning the crown and bouquet of roses. He considers these trophies an honor for any girl...uh any guy...uh person!

This is the last formal dance for the seniors and Chuck wishes it to be the most memorable. He wants to be Queen and hopes people who doubt his sincerity will talk to him. His desire to provide an occasion we can all remember is summed up in one quote; " Hell yes, I want Roses!!!!!!!"

---Bill Platt

WAS KNIGHTHOOD REALLY IN FLOWER ?

The simple joys of maidenhood has past. An age old doctrine that once placed the female upon the pedestal, sceptre in hand, and crowned with roses has died. What a bunch of... All honors she bequeathes to a far worthier sect. (All what?)

Oh, she claims, no modesty, accepts no praise for what many mistakenly recognizes as a noble and just deed. She simply admits to a universal truth.

Man is the wise, supreme, innovator of the human race, who's charm, wit, and intelligent air, glows within his virle, handsome, adoring self, which is so full of notable qualities and virtues.

He is unsurpassed. So, who better should rise to fame, and bear the glory ?

Who are we, the inferior female, inadequate and undeserving, to raise a sigh! For generations and generations we have known the truth, we could not escape it. (that's all men ever talk about) Everyman has whispered this sweet nothing into some maidens ear. (Perhaps it was a plot) Ah, the male ego conquers all doesn't it ?

We shall no longer live out a lie. Give them what they deserve.(Hell !)

They can be speculated, goggled over, paraded and handled like a prize heifer.

If men feel so neglected and forgotten, then certainly let us reinforce their confidence.

What do we care, we are nothing, have nothing, expect nothing, butbut in time the meek shall inherit the earth.

EDITORIAL

Alas, things are not well--again. Henry Kissenger's peace mirage has vanished and became, instead, desert sand. During the last month, the North Vietnamese have launched an all out, full scale attack upon South Vietnam. One after another, the provinces in the northern region of South Vietnam surrendered to the intensive attack of the Communists. As this went on, the villagers of the provinces and South Vietnamese soldiers fled for their lives, leaving behind their homes, and U.S. military equipment. Now, the North Vietnamese have advanced to the perimeter of Saigon, and there they sit and wait.

South Vietnam's problems do not stop there. Within their own government matters are not well either. Last week, President Thieu fired and replaced his entire cabinet. Now, a group of South Vietnamese have come out and denounced his entire regime, claiming that they are corrupt; and responsible for the defeat of the northern provinces. And, the other day, there was an assassination attempt on Thieu's life. Any day, we expect, there will be a coup d'etat and the entire government in South Vietnam will fall.

Tonight, appearing before a joint session of Congress, President Ford presented his new plan of action. His proposal includes, among other things, a grant of one Billion dollars for emergency aid to South Vietnam. The majority of which, will be used for military armaments, with the remainder going to humanitarian needs. Surprisingly, he also asked for the complete authority to send troops into South Vietnam again--for evacuation purposes. Congress, a few years ago, stripped the President of his power to send troops in without their approval. Remember when they did that; well it was right after Nixon marched into Cambodia.

Recently, I read what one unidentified foreign diplomat said after he talked with our brilliant President. "He's the biggest ass I've ever met," he stated. Wow! That is so true. I mean, what does he think he can fool us with. Only last week it was doubtful that he would get the 200 million, he had already asked for, and now he wants one Billion. As for him having complete authority to send troops back in: No way. His proposal is totally unrealistic, yet he expects us to buy it.

It's obvious that Ford's actions are political. He's trying to demonstrate to America and the rest of the world, that he wants to help South Vietnam, and when the country is defeated, torn and Communist, he'll shift all the blame to Congress. Also, he's trying to prove to the rest of our allies that he is willing to support them.

A woman from South Vietnam recently stated, "We don't want YOUR help anymore, you've done enough for us". So, what can we do? As we sit and watch our TV's, we witness the horrible suffering of the people of South Vietnam, and we, as a nation, become filled with guilt and some pity. About the only thing we can do now is prepare ourselves for the bloodshed that will occur, when the North Vietnamese take over. The only good, if there is one, is that America might learn from this experience. Perhaps in the future, we might learn that there are better ways to help our allies than just sending over military supplies and good ole' American know how.
